courtesy of the management of the show and that the most friendly relations exist between the show people and us.

THE KING and THE KID

San Francisco—This ought to be a short story and its title ought to be "The King and the Kid."

The King is Albert of Belgium. The kid is Richard Siprelle of San Francisco, eleven years old. The King had entered his automobile after his official reception at the City Hall here and no doubt thought himself safe, surrounded as he was by secret service men, soldiers, and police. Enter the kid: leaping on the running board of King Albert's machine, he thrust into the King's hand a Thrift Stamp with a card on which to paste it.

"King Albert," said the kid to the King, "don't you want a Thrift Stamp?" The boy with his natty overseas soldier's cap in hand smilingly awaited his answer. The King took the card and stamp; said "Thank you," and the incident in the King's life and the epic in the kid's life closed then and there with a forward lurch of the automobile, leaving the kid behind.

"I just wanted the King to know," said Richard, "what a chance America gives us kids to learn how to save so that when the King gets back home maybe he will make Thrift Stamps for Belgian kids. The newspapers said that I wanted two-bits for the stamp but I didn't. I am going to write the King a letter and see if he won't send me his photograph with his name on it."

Needless to say, Richard Siprelle is in the movies, so if you see a picture of the King in his automobile with a kid on the running board, you will know all about it.

KAHN'S COMMON SENSE

Teaching of thrift and increased investment by the people of America in government savings securities, War Savings Stamps, Treasury Certificates and in savings banks are methods advocated by Otto H. Kahn of New York for relieving the economic situation engendered by the high cost of necessities.

This suggestion by the eminent partner of the firm of Kahn, Loeb & Co. was made in an open letter to an unnamed government official at Washington. As a check to waste and certain forms of "useless extravagance," Mr. Kahn advocated the establishment of a federal bureau of salvage which would instruct the people of the United States on the possibilities of recreating wealth from the scrap heap. He points out that the government in the last three years has saved over $500,000,000 in this manner.
